

Suspect in Kidnapping Case in 1925 Quizzed In Lindy Baby Mystery

One "John Smith" Moved From Tombs To West Side Prison, Questioned.

KIDNAP SUSPECT NABBED IN N. Y.

New York, March 15 (AP)—The mysterious John Smith, who was questioned about the Lindbergh kidnapping and then moved from the Tombs prison to West Side prison was taken in an ambulance today to the office of R. R. Patterson, Jr., commissioner of correction, for further examination.

It was learned that Smith whose age, occupation and address have been withheld by police was the subject yesterday of a conference of high police officials.

Arrest Suspect

Hopewell, March 15 (AP)—Investigators went to New York city today to question Frank Berg, prominent figure in a fast-paced alleged kidnapping attempt years ago, to determine whether any new clues might be obtained from him in the Lindbergh kidnapping mystery.

Berg was arrested in 1925 in connection with a reported attempt to lure Max Phillips, wealthy collar manufacturer, aboard Berg's yacht. Berg and a woman, who Phillips said represented herself as a countess but who was really Berg's wife, were never indicted and charges against them were dropped.

Phillips went last week to see Colonel Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police, and after a long conversation it was announced that every effort would be made to find out if there was any possible connection between the alleged attempt to kidnap Phillips and the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby.

Fear for Babe's Life

Meanwhile fears by police that the 20-month-old son of Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh might be dead were revealed. It became known that police had asked all keepers of incinerators in hotels, apartment houses, and city institutions to watch for bundles containing baby clothes.

Tonight it will be two weeks since the world famous infant was stolen from his crib. Police have exhausted hundreds of false clues, rumors and fantastic tales.

Advisors of the parents now are pinning their chief hope on possible opening of negotiations with the kidnapers through the undercover agents, Morris Rosner, Irving Bliz and Salvy Spitalo, but if these men have even begun to solve the mystery, it is being kept dark. Rosner visited the Lindbergh home last night.

COUNTY SCHOOL GETS QUARTERS

Sweet Home Pupils Now Attending School In Bonneauville.

School directors of Mt. Pleasant township have secured one of the two rooms in the former Bonneauville parochial school building in which to hold sessions for children of Sweet Home school, which was damaged by fire and a falling ceiling last Thursday afternoon. The other room in the former parochial school building is used by the Bonneauville school. Mrs. Inez Bridge was the teacher at Sweet Home school.

The Mt. Pleasant directors believe that Sweet Home school can be repaired for re-opening next fall, but they are awaiting a state inspector before taking any action. The building was erected before the civil war and is one of the older school buildings in the county.

Meanwhile, children at Plank's school in the upper Huntingdon township, destroyed by fire, Monday morning, are enjoying a short holiday until arrangements can be made for their accommodation elsewhere. Professor W. Raymond Shank, Adams county superintendent of schools, was meeting with directors of Huntingdon township today in an effort to find some way out of their present difficulty.

A meeting of the Butler township committee on bovine tuberculosis eradication met at the home of the chairman, P. M. Bream, Monday evening, to hear results of a canvass of the herd owners in that township. After the records were compiled for each district it was discovered that 90 per cent of the herd owners were willing to have the test and therefore Butler township qualifies to be tested under the area plan.

Washington, March 15 (AP)—Vincent Kerens will have to make another try for the $2,000,000 prize which depends upon convincing a court he has been sober and behaved himself for five years.

The supreme court Monday refused to review the decision of a circuit court of appeals that the son of the late Richard C. Kerens, St. Louis millionaire and former ambassador to Austria-Hungary, had not conducted himself properly for five years.

The father had tried to reform his son during his lifetime and these efforts failing he left a provision in his will which said Vincent should get his $2,000,000 share in the estate if he could convince the trustee he had "passed five consecutive years of continued sobriety and good behavior."

He finally succeeded in convincing the trustee, the St. Louis Union Trust company, that he had been

Steers Escape; Are Killed After 20-mile Chase

Two large steers belonging to A. B. C. Williams, near York Springs, and part of a herd of steers Williams was fattening for market, left the farm when taken out of the stable to go to the watering trough. It was several days before he secured trace of the steers which first went to Bonners Hill and then on to the South Mountains.

George and Lewis Johnson, William Eldred, Lewis Williams, John Albert, Raymond Smith, Milton Prosser, Claude Smith, Harland Sowers, Raymond and Ernest Topper and Ralph Williams tracked the steers over the mountains. Ten of the men were armed with rifles as the owner had decided to shoot the steers.

The hunters sighted the steers in the mountains near Rocky Ridge, but could not get close as the animals were as wild as deer. 35 shots were fired in a chase that covered 20 miles, before the animals were killed. Lewis Williams and Lewis Johnson were the hunters who finally killed the animals several miles north of the Dillsburg Camp meeting grounds. The steers weighed more than 1,200 pounds apiece on the hoof.

George Eastman, Camera King, Suicides Monday

Multimillionaire Head Of Eastman Kodak Company Shoots Himself.

Rochester, N. Y., March 15 (AP).—George Eastman shot and killed himself at 12:50 p. m. Monday, leaving this simple note for his friends: "My work is done. Why wait?"

He was a multimillionaire of diversified interests, long recognized as the developer and head of one of the world's greatest industries and celebrated for philanthropy that amounted to more than $75,000,000.

Physician Then In Home

Lately in failing health, he had been confined to his bed in his Rochester home on East avenue. There Monday he asked attendants to leave his side.

A moment later they heard the shot that killed him. Among them was his personal physician, Dr. Dudley D. Stewart, who announced the suicide nearly two hours later.

Mr. Eastman was a bachelor in his seventy-eighth year. He had few, if any, relatives.

With the report of his death, the stock of the Eastman Kodak company showed a net drop of $6.50 on the New York exchange. The news was a severe shock to the market, opening as it did on the heels of the suicide of Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king.

Had Improved Recently

Mr. Eastman's simple note, which was addressed "To my friends," was left at his bedside. There was nothing in his long career to indicate a motive for suicide. Doctor Stewart said only that he "apparently was in such mental state." He had been ill for several years, but had recovered to a degree that encouraged his friends, the physician added.

Several friends, most of them connected with the Eastman company, held a sick-room conference with him earlier in the day. He seemed cheerful, they said, and the business of the company was not discussed. They signed a codicil to his will as witnesses, but failed to suspect his plan.

Before sending the attendants from his room he dictated a letter to a private secretary. Its contents were not divulged.

Bankers familiar with Eastman affairs were convinced that his act was the result of mature years and ill health, and nothing more.

Mr. Eastman said of Thomas Edison when the latter died: "His death closes a career that set the tempo for an unparalleled era of invention," and the same might now be said of himself in the matter of industrial development.

SPEAKER URGES CARE OF TEETH

C. J. Hollister, Of State Department, Addresses Local Audience.

"Modern Dental Surgery," in which the proper service of prevention, rather than the cure, was the subject of an address, Monday evening, in science hall, at Gettysburg college, by Dr. C. J. Hollister, of the state department, Harrisburg. Doctor Hollister spoke under the auspices of the Beta Beta Beta fraternity, of the college. Many local physicians and dentists were present as well as the Chemical society, of the college, guests of the fraternity.

Doctor Hollister cited one of the main factors in the care of the teeth as being the education of the public in the proper care of the teeth to prevent decay and other teeth disorders. He said that a child should be taught at an early age the proper care of teeth, how to prevent disorders and infections and pointed out the psychological effect and educational value of a clean mouth.

The speaker declared that certain foods contain certain vitamins essential to the proper care of teeth. His address was illustrated with moving pictures.

Doctor Hollister also paid tribute to the 250 dental hygienists in Pennsylvania who devote all of their time to educating and teaching school children the proper care of teeth.

16 GUIDES ON 1932 ROSTER OF LOCAL CHAMBER

Enroll As Members At Special Association Meeting Held Monday Evening.

DAVIS ISSUES NEW RULINGS

After hearing their president, William H. Allison, praise the Chamber of Commerce for its efforts on behalf of guides last year, sixteen members of the Gettysburg battlefield guides' association enrolled as members for this year at a meeting at the fire engine house, Monday evening.

Mr. Allison pointed out that last summer the Chamber of Commerce came to the aid of the guides on several occasions, and promised that the help would be continued this year. Mr. Allison is a member of the membership committee of the Chamber.

The guides were informed that the $10 membership fee for the Chamber of Commerce could be paid any time and in any amount up to July 1. Last year between 75 and 80 members of the guides' association were members of the Chamber.

Clarify Solicitation

Benton D. Gilbert reported for the committee that appeared before council at the March meeting asking that no time limit on soliciting be set. Mr. Gilbert reported that council made no mention of a time limit in its ordinance.

In explanation of the apparent disagreement among members of the guides' association over a time limit on soliciting, Mr. Allison explained that councilmen misunderstood John Slaybaugh, a guide, when he made the "suggestion" to council that soliciting be prohibited after 6 p. m. Mr. Gilbert told council at the last meeting that Mr. Slaybaugh was unauthorized to represent the guides' association in the matter of urging a time limit on soliciting, but Mr. Allison explained that Mr. Slaybaugh and committee men merely "suggested" the time

MANY PROTEST TOWN'S SEWER TAX ORDINANCE

Heaviest Levy Is Against Larger Hotels And Apartment Houses.

COUNCIL MEETS WEDNESDAY EVE

Gettysburg's new tax ordinance, passed at the regular March meeting, is one of the most important items of business to be discussed at an adjourned meeting of council, Wednesday evening.

Passed to derive revenue to meet operating and upkeep expenses at the sewage disposal plant and to provide a fund from which to pay for additions which the state department of health has ordered for the treatment plant, the ordinance was not kindly received by local property owners.

Councilmen, in their discussions before passage of the ordinance, said the measure was designed to place a tax on Gettysburg college, the Lutheran theological seminary and Gettysburg academy, which as educational institutions are free of taxation, but the borough fathers have since discovered that the ordinance has acted as a "boomerang".

Hotels Hard Hit

Instead of the three educational institutions being the ones hardest hit by the ordinance, Gettysburg's hotels, particularly the Hotel Gettysburg and the Eagle, would pay sewer taxes in excess of the college, academy and seminary.

Both hotels would pay hundreds of dollars in sewer taxes under the rates set by the ordinance. The Hotel Gettysburg's tax would be approximately $500, while the Eagle's tax would be in the neighborhood of $400. Both Henry M. Scharf, manager of the Hotel Gettysburg, and George F. Eberhart, owner of the Eagle hotel, are expected to attend the Wednesday evening session to protest the ordinance.

Both hotel owners pointed out that if their hotels were filled that year round the tax would not be excessive, but inasmuch as their business is largely confined to the summer months and their hosteleries are vacant for the greater part of the year, the tax is out of proportion to their income.

Affects Rentals

Apartment house owners also are protesting the tax on the ground that it will mean increased rents at a time when every effort is being made to lower rentals. Several apartment house owners also are expected to appear before council to add their protests.

The average minimum tax for an ordinary house would be approximately $5.50 under the new sewer tax ordinance, and larger homes, with more outlets and sewer connections, would pay correspondingly larger amounts, some of them as high as $15 a year.

The ordinance is also deficient, it is pointed out, in that it provides no tax for garages.

Although the sewer tax ordinance was passed finally at the March meeting, opponents are hoping to bring enough pressure to bear on council to have it repealed or a new measure drafted.

Council will also consider the purchase of a light closed car for use of its police officers and the purchase of three dozen rubber hats, coats and boots for the fire company.

C. E. Executives Meet On Monday

Discussion of cooperation with the young people's council of the Adams county Sunday school association occupied practically the entire time at a meeting of the executive board of the Adams county Christian endeavor union at a meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Announcement was made by Miss Grace Durberaw, assistant junior superintendent, that the junior members of the county will hold a service at the county home April 26, when Easter gifts will be presented to the men and women living there.

Easter dawn services are being planned in the various districts in the county.

"Modern Dental Surgery," in which the proper service of prevention, rather than the cure, was the subject of an address, Monday evening, in science hall, at Gettysburg college, by Dr. C. J. Hollister, of the state department, Harrisburg. Doctor Hollister spoke under the auspices of the Beta Beta Beta fraternity, of the college. Many local physicians and dentists were present as well as the Chemical society, of the college, guests of the fraternity.

Doctor Hollister cited one of the main factors in the care of the teeth as being the education of the public in the proper care of the teeth to prevent decay and other teeth disorders. He said that a child should be taught at an early age the proper care of teeth, how to prevent disorders and infections and pointed out the psychological effect and educational value of a clean mouth.

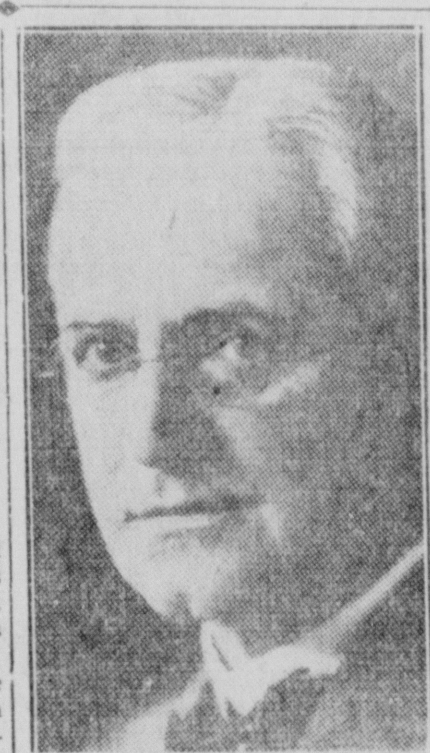

The speaker declared that certain foods contain certain vitamins essential to the proper care of teeth. His address was illustrated with moving pictures.

Doctor Hollister also paid tribute to the 250 dental hygienists in Pennsylvania who devote all of their time to educating and teaching school children the proper care of teeth.

Noted German Actor Coming Here Thursday

Max Montor, one of the best known of German actors, will give his interpretation and readings of dramatic scenes and ballads from the pen of the famous Goethe, in Brusa chapel, Thursday night at 8 o'clock. Mr. Montor is coming here under the auspices of "Der Deutsche Verein," honorary German fraternity at the college, and the German department.

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, greatest German poet and dramatist, died March 22, 1832. The centennial of his death is being observed in Germany and elsewhere throughout the world. The local German fraternity, desirous of participating in the observance, have pledged individual contributions to finance Mr. Montor's appearance here. There will be no admission at Thursday's performance.

Mr. Montor, who learned the English language in three months, first starred with Eva le Gallienne, in "The Master Builder." He is accustomed to playing five different characters a week and in the course of a season, from August to June, at least one hundred. He has at his immediate disposal a repertory almost beyond belief, and his memory, remarkable by nature, had had such training as to enable him to recite entire plays without aid of any kind.

The presentation of Mr. Montor is made possible by the local organizations at the college and the public is invited to attend.

The Goethe centennial is attracting greater proportions in the United States than in any other English speaking country.

16 GUIDES ON 1932 ROSTER OF LOCAL CHAMBER

Enroll As Members At Special Association Meeting Held Monday Evening.

DAVIS ISSUES NEW RULINGS

After hearing their president, William H. Allison, praise the Chamber of Commerce for its efforts on behalf of guides last year, sixteen members of the Gettysburg battlefield guides' association enrolled as members for this year at a meeting at the fire engine house, Monday evening.

Mr. Allison pointed out that last summer the Chamber of Commerce came to the aid of the guides on several occasions, and promised that the help would be continued this year. Mr. Allison is a member of the membership committee of the Chamber.

The guides were informed that the $10 membership fee for the Chamber of Commerce could be paid any time and in any amount up to July 1. Last year between 75 and 80 members of the guides' association were members of the Chamber.

Clarify Solicitation
Benton D. Gilbert reported for the committee that appeared before council at the March meeting asking that no time limit on soliciting be set. Mr. Gilbert reported that council made no mention of a time limit in its ordinance.

In explanation of the apparent disagreement among members of the guides' association over a time limit on soliciting, Mr. Allison explained that councilmen misunderstood John Slaybaugh, a guide, when he made the "suggestion" to council that soliciting be prohibited after 6 p. m. Mr. Gilbert told council at the last meeting that Mr. Slaybaugh was unauthorized to represent the guides' association in the matter of urging a time limit on soliciting, but Mr. Allison explained that Mr. Slaybaugh and committee men merely "suggested" the time (Continued on Page Two)

MANY PROTEST TOWN'S SEWER TAX ORDINANCE

Heaviest Levy Is Against Larger Hotels And Apartment Houses.

COUNCIL MEETS WEDNESDAY EVE

Gettysburg's new tax ordinance, passed at the regular March meeting, is one of the most important items of business to be discussed at an adjourned meeting of council, Wednesday evening.

Passed to derive revenue to meet operating and upkeep expenses at the sewage disposal plant and to provide a fund from which to pay for additions which the state department of health has ordered for the treatment plant, the ordinance was not kindly received by local property owners.

Councilmen, in their discussions before passage of the ordinance, said the measure was designed to place a tax on Gettysburg college, the Lutheran theological seminary and Gettysburg academy, which as educational institutions are free of taxation, but the borough fathers have since discovered that the ordinance has acted as a "boomerang".

Hotels Hard Hit
Instead of the three educational institutions being the ones hardest hit by the ordinance, Gettysburg's hotels, particularly the Hotel Gettysburg and the Eagle, would pay sewer taxes in excess of the college, academy and seminary.

Both hotels would pay hundreds of dollars in sewer taxes under the rates set by the ordinance. The Hotel Gettysburg's tax would be approximately $500, while the Eagle's tax would be in the neighborhood of $400. Both Henry M. Scharf, manager of the Hotel Gettysburg, and George F. Eberhart, owner of the Eagle hotel, are expected to attend the Wednesday evening session to protest the ordinance.

Both hotel owners pointed out that if their hotels were filled the year round the tax would not be excessive, but inasmuch as their business is largely confined to the summer months and their hosteleries are vacant for the greater part of the year, the tax is out of proportion to their income.

Affects Rentals
Apartment house owners also are protesting the tax on the ground that it will mean increased rents at a time when every effort is being made to lower rentals. Several apartment house owners also are expected to appear before council to add their protests.

The average minimum tax for an ordinary house would be approximately $5.50 under the new sewer tax ordinance, and larger homes, with more outlets and sewer connections, would pay corresponding larger amounts, some of them as high as $15 a year.

The ordinance is also deficient, it is pointed out, in that it provides no tax for garages.

Although the sewer tax ordinance was passed finally at the March meeting, opponents are hoping to bring enough pressure to bear on council to have it repealed or a new measure drafted.

Council will also consider the purchase of a light closed car for use of its police officers and the purchase of three dozen rubber hats, coats and boots for the fire company.

C. E. Executives Meet On Monday

Discussion of cooperation with the young people's council of the Adams county Sunday school association occupied practically the entire time at a meeting of the executive board of the Adams county Christian Endeavor union at a meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Stallsmith, North Stratton street, Monday evening.

Announcement was made by Miss Grace Durbarow, assistant junior superintendent, that the junior members of the county will hold a service at the county home April 26, when Easter gifts will be presented to the men and women living there. Easter dawn services are being planned in the various districts in the county.

The April meeting of the board will be held at the home of Miss Grace Durbarow, Mt. Joy.

CHIMNEY BLAZE

The Gettysburg fire company was called out this morning to extinguish a chimney fire at the home of James Irb, Breckenridge street. No loss was reported.

There's Gonna Be a Fight!

Pittsburgh, March 15 (AP)—When Patrick J. Sullivan, the carpenter, heard what Patrick J. Sullivan, the congressman, said about him in the papers Monday night, he put aside his saw and hatchet and announced:

"There's gonna be a fight!"

Some time ago Patrick J. Sullivan announced himself at a candidate for the thirty-second district congressional seat. That seat is held by another Patrick J. Sullivan.

Friends of both shook their heads and predicted trouble.

Monday night, it appears, they were right.

Representative Sullivan filed a suit in the Dauphin county court.

He wanted the petition of Patrick J. Sullivan, the carpenter, thrown out.

Then, the papers said, Representative Sullivan charged "half the names on the other Sullivan's petition are forgeries."

That's what made Patrick J. Sullivan, the carpenter, "mad," he explained to callers.

"This is only the start," he grumbled as he yanked off his overalls, "but, by golly, I've had this idea of going to Washington in my head for five years and I'm going to get there."

"You can look for plenty of fireworks from the other Sullivan and you can look for plenty from me, too."

"Will Patrick J. Sullivan be at the hearing on Representative Sullivan's suit at Harrisburg Thursday morning?"

"Will I?" shouted the 54-year-old builder. "Yes, I will and everybody'll know it, too."

BUICK OFFICIAL
EXPLAINS PLAN
FOR NEW MODELS

Announcement Of New Models
To Change From Winter
To Summer.

By E. T. STRONG
President and General Manager.

By E. T. STRONG
President and General Manager.
Buick Motor Company
The program promulgated early last year by the board of directors of the national automobile chamber of commerce to change the taking of inventories from winter to summer, with a corresponding change from summer to winter for new model announcements, has potential benefits that extend far beyond the automobile industry itself. Those benefits lie in the stimulation of the raw material markets during the winter months.
One of the aims of all industrial enterprises is the maintenance of steady markets. Regardless of whether or not the particular industry seeks its market among users of raw materials, or among those whose requirements are for finished or partly finished goods, the desire of enjoying sustained demand throughout the year remains the same.

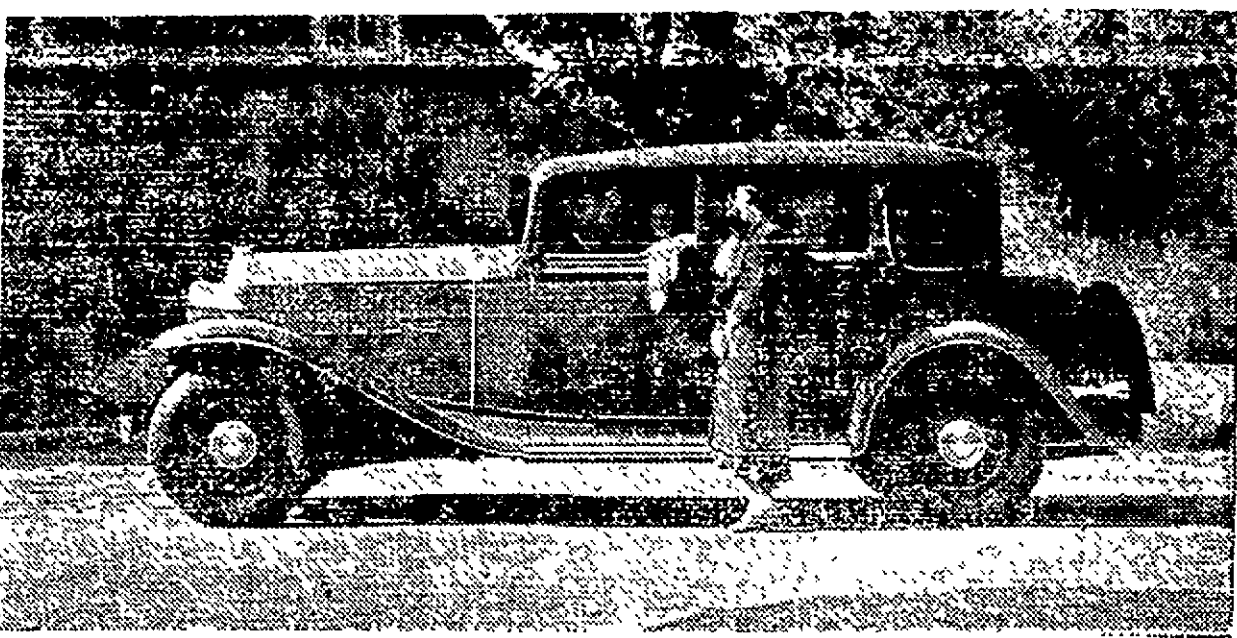

Steadies Business
To this end much study has been given by industrial leaders and sales executives to the leveling off of peaks and the filling in of valleys in the sales curves that trace the yearly history of almost every great business.

The above program was adopted to remedy this and other problems for the automobile industry. It was put into effect last year by several manufacturers, Buick leading with its new model in mid-November.
Were this program to be followed by the automobile industry generally, it is not too much to say that it would go far toward relieving winter dullness in many other of the country's industries.

The motoring public is always interested in a new car. While the mid-summer peak will no doubt continue, nevertheless there are many thousands of motorists who like to have the new model of their chosen car as soon as possible after it is announced. Then, too, there are advantages in having a dependable new car during the winter, or to be able to obtain the latest model for vacation touring as early in the year as one chooses.

The automobile buys in the open market everything it uses. Its thousand and one demands reach to almost every state in the union. Thus, the introduction of a new sales peak

A NEW BUICK MODEL

Buick 1932 Straight Eight—5-Door Sedan, 134-inch Wheelbase

In the automobile industry is reflected by every enterprise supplying it with materials.

Raw Materials Used

The list of raw and manufactured materials going into the modern automobile is an extensive one. Its leading items are steel, iron, rubber (manufactured), plate glass, lumber, leather, aluminum, copper, tin, lead, zinc, nickel, cotton, upholstery cloth, top and side curtain material, asbestos for brake linings.

It is also a large consumer of chemicals, industrial oils, tool steels, lubricating oils, gasoline, iron ores and coal.

Of some of these materials, the automobile industry is the largest consumer. This is true of strip, bar and sheet steel, of malleable iron, rubber, plate glass, nickel and lead. In the bringing in of these commodities and in shipping its finished products, the automobile industry is a large user of both rail and water transportation.

The automobile industry maintains no great reserve stocks of materials. It places continuous orders as its needs develop. Therefore, it can be seen that any improvement in the retail automobile market during the winter months is immediately felt by all. Every section of the country reaps its share of the benefits and gets those benefits promptly.

BRIDGE, HOCKEY RECEIPTS

SWELL DULUTH IDLE FUND

Duluth, Minn. (AP)—A hockey game and a bridge tournament have helped to swell this city's unemployment fund.
When the city staged its bridge tournament with a $1 fee charged, the fund was enriched $108 after expenses were paid.
Police and firemen engaged in a hockey battle and more than $2,500 was added to the fund.

TIRE COMPANY
PERFECTS NEW SAFETY TIRE

After three years of careful analyzing and experimentation the B. F. Goodrich company announces the new Safety Silvertown tire, one designed to add thousands of miles of additional anti-skid performance.

The new tire is fifteen per cent thicker and thus assures the motorist of safe motoring. Husky cleats of tough rubber add longer life to the tire when an ordinary tire is worn out.

Tests made with the dynamometer show the new Safety Silvertown offers greater resistance to skidding. Jamming of brakes brings the car to a safe stop with these tires.

Sixty-seven different designs of tires were developed while eighteen types of tires were actually produced. Tests were made over one million miles of roads, all kinds of road surfaces being included. The tires proved to be all the manufacturers expected them to be and well qualified for the title, "the safest tire ever built."

The Ogylre Tire company, Carlisle street, are the local distributors for the Goodrich company.

INVENTS POLO STICK

London (AP)—Lord Louis Mountbatten has invented a new polo mallet. Patent rights have been granted him for a stick, the head of which is made in oval cross section with the width greater than the depth so as to enable the player to give a greater loft to the ball.

Ralph Thompson, of Omaha, captain-elect of Iowa state college's 1933 basketball team, will be the sole returning regular from this year's team.

Auburn Ships 2,508
Cars In January

Auburn, Ind.—January car shipments of the Auburn automobile company totaled 2,508. E. L. Cord, president, has announced. This figure compares with 2,017 cars shipped in January, 1931, and represents an increase of slightly more than 24.3 per cent.

Of the total cars built and shipped during January, more than 59 per cent were custom models, equipped with dual ratio, he said. Convertible models represented approximately 27 per cent of the total.

KNOXVILLE FAMILY
CLAN OF SPORTSMEN

Knoxville, Tenn. (AP)—One of Knoxville's most remarkable families is the house of Kreis.

There's John Kreis, the father, one of the best trap shooters in the country.

There's Pete, his son, famous as an automobile racer, and the other two boys, Harmon and John, who can play better than the average game of golf on most anybody's course.

And the golf goes-for-Pete, too, and Papa John.

The "Kreis clan" is noted for its sportsmanship. It is not uncommon to see the four of them playing golf together in summer—enjoying the match, better apparently, because it's all in the family.

DUEL ENDS QUARREL

Budapest, Hungary (AP)—A quarrel between two 7-year-old girls in line at a ticket window spread to their parents and ended only after the father of one wounded the other male parent in a saber duel. Then the men embraced and the girls kissed and made up.

AUTOS DEPEND UPON RESEARCH

Car Business Thrives With Improvement, Says,
Chrysler.

By Walter P. Chrysler

It is not my practice nor my present intention to make any predictions as to the future of business in general or of the automobile business in particular. What this industry thinks about its prospects is dramatically and effectively told in the new automobiles for 1932 which are now being displayed throughout the country. I know of no other industry which has made such a practical pledge of faith in its own progress and in the future of the United States.

There are many factors, of course, which contribute to the continuing success of the automobile industry as a whole and to the progress of an individual company. A good product which people will buy, a sound financial structure, efficient, economical production, an aggressive, widespread, alert marketing organization—all these are primary essentials. In all of them we have reached a very high degree of perfection because, no matter what immediate results are achieved, we are always striving for something better.

There is nothing static about automobile making. Improvement thrives upon improvement—in every branch of the business.

Engineers Look Forward

Perhaps no better illustration of this dynamic character can be found than in engineering research which, not content with the automotive marvels of today, is constantly looking forward to the automobile of the future.

My own opinion is that as long as this industry maintains a broad conception of the possibilities that lie in this direction—that is, in the direction of engineering research—it need have no real apprehension of either its increasing usefulness to the public or the public response to its efforts.

The soundness of this belief has been amply demonstrated. Only last year, when our own engineers, after years of patient research, careful experimentation and thorough tests in the Chrysler engineering laboratories, perfected the floating power principle of engine mountings, the result was an unprecedented increase in the sale of Plymouth motor cars.

Research is important. Fundamental research of this kind holds the key to our industry's advancement. It will open the door to new things, to better methods, to larger markets for our products. The public is just as keen to recognize the scientific achievements of a Zeder or a Kettering as it is to recognize those of a Millikan. I believe, even more so, because people find in this form the practical applications to their own comfort, convenience and enjoyment of life.

It is a good thing for the automobile industry as it is for the public that we have in our engineering laboratories men who, regardless of the ups and downs of trade, are supported in their scientific researches and encouraged to look to the future and to work incessantly toward the perfect automobile.

Finer, Safer Brakes

A definite new advance has been added to Chrysler's self-equalizing Hydraulic Brakes in the form of new Centrifuge brake drums. A steel drum with cast-iron lining—permanently fused together. Under all conditions, Chrysler brakes last longer, remain cooler, retain uniform efficiency and give a quicker, "softer" and more positive action. A development that adds safety at faster speeds.
Chrysler steel bodies are All-Steel construction—rigidly reinforced and welded into one piece—the kind of construction that gives you the safety you should have and should demand. Adding still further to your protection and comfort is a new Double-Drop Girder-Truss Frame of tremendous strength and rigidity.

Good-bye All Spring Squeaks

New patented Oilite Squeak-Proof Springs on all three of the new Eights have the great advantages of never squeaking, and never needing lubrication.

Besides all of these outstanding superiorities, Chrysler retains the following important basic features—pioneered or popularized by Chrysler and features of Chrysler cars for years: In the Eights, a 4-speed transmission with internal Dual High Gears; in the Six, a Silent-Second Easy-Shift Transmission; all have the high-compression engine; full force-feed lubrication; ventilated crankcase; aluminum alloy Invar Strut pistons; counterweighted crankshaft; modern fuel system with fuel pump; oil filter; air cleaner and intake silencer; noiseless spring shackles; cowling ventilators; small base wheels and large tires; adjustable front seat; interior sun visors; indirectly lighted instrument panel; treadle-type accelerator—and many others.

Very Low—Very Smart

All of the new Chryslers are noticeably low, smart and fleet in appearance. The bodies are larger and roomier, with greatly increased luxury in design, finish and appointments.
More powerful cars than ever. Faster than ever. If you like real speed, Chrysler has it. You may never care to drive 75—85—90 miles an hour, but the great power that makes these speeds possible makes Chrysler performance at any speed you choose to drive, the most enjoyable performance under the sun.
Drive one of these new Chryslers and learn what a truly modern car it is.

A new Chrysler Six, five body models, $885 to $935 (Automatic Clutch and Oilite Squeak-Proof Springs on all Sixes at slight extra cost); a new Chrysler Eight, four body models, $1435 to $1495; a new Chrysler Imperial Eight, two body models, $1925 to $1945; a new Chrysler Imperial Custom Eight, six body models, $2595 to $3595. GOODRICH ANNOUNCES
Safest Tire Ever Built!

More Anti-Skid Mileage..
15% Thicker Tread

Three years in the making
—1,257,000 test-miles

Cross section of tread of the new Safety Silvertown—measuring 15% thicker... A tire worn smooth is a dangerous tire. 15% more thickness in the Safety Silvertown brings thousands of miles additional anti-skid performance—safe motoring. Husky cleats of tough rubber continue to grip the road long after the tread of an ordinary tire is worn away.

Better Grip on the Road..
New Tractive Tread Design

By exact tests with the dynamometer, the new Safety Silvertown offers greater resistance to skidding... When you jam on your brakes, Safety Silvertowns bring you to a safe stop... You can jam on your brakes harder without losing control—an enormous advantage in an emergency.

THREE years ago Goodrich saw development in the need for a stronger, safer tire. Greater speeds—quick-action brakes—smaller wheel sizes—glassy, oil-film roads—congested traffic—all were placing greater responsibility on tires.

It took three years to create the tire which meets these conditions. Sixty-seven different designs were developed. Eighteen types of tires were actually produced.

These experimental tires covered more than 1,257,000 test-miles on cars of the Silver Fleet, before final selection was made.

Now, three years in the making—tested—proved—Goodrich confidently announces the safest tire ever built.

TWO KILLED IN MOTOR CRASH

Two Others Seriously Injured
When Bus And Auto
Crash Head-on.

Philadelphia, March 15.—Two Philadelphians, a man and a woman, were killed and two others seriously injured in an automobile crash at Trappe, near Collegeville, late Monday.

Those who lost their lives were Mrs. Lawrence Pleis, 26 of 2432 West Harold street, and Frederick A. Schumacker, a carpenter, of 2829 West Harold street.

The injured are Robert Pleis, 5, a son of the dead woman, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Henry Pleis, 2316 Huntingdon street. Both suffered possible fractures of the skull, deep scalp wounds and other injuries.

The victims' car, driven by Schumacker, a friend of the Pleis family, collided with a Reading Transportation company bus bound for this city. Several passengers in the bus were cut and bruised.

The automobile, traveling east on the Benjamin Franklin highway, was struck with such force that it was jammed against an embankment and wrecked. Mrs. Lawrence Pleis and Schumacker were killed instantly.

Corporal Clarence Boyle, of the state highway patrol, was the first to arrive at the scene. Aided by the bus driver and bus passengers, he extricated the victims from their wrecked car and had them sent to Homeopathic hospital in Pottstown. Later the bodies of Mrs. Lawrence Pleis and Schumacker were removed to an undertaking establishment. Schumacker and the Pleises were returning home from Graterford, where they had attended a dance. Police notified their relatives of the accident shortly after 5 p. m., and the husbands of the two women left for Pottstown at once.

HOOVER'S HAT PUT IN RING

Postmaster General Brown
Announces Candidacy Of
President Hoover.

Washington.—It was not the actual announcement of President Hoover's candidacy for renomination on the republican ticket that interested Washington observers so much, but rather the man chosen to make it.

It has been known for a long while that Hoover seeks a second term. The famous "Who-But-Hoover" question has been settled in the minds of almost everyone. True, the formal announcements were news for all the papers. But the fact that a certain gentleman—Postmaster General Walter P. Brown—gave out the statement may mean that a vexing problem of the G. O. P. has been solved.

That problem is a new chairman of the republican national committee.

Why Brown? Why was the postmaster general delegated to announce formally that President Hoover was a candidate for renomination on the republican ticket?

Such statements usually are voiced either by the candidates themselves or by the party committee chairman. The latter happens to be Senator Fess of Ohio. The senator was in the capital at the time—just a few blocks away in the senate chamber.

If not Fess, then why shouldn't it have been the second in command, Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the party?

Or Pat Hurley, secretary of war? It begins to look as though rumors are true that Brown will take over the committee and engage in rounding up convention delegates for Hoover.

A paragraph in his Hoover announcement seems to bear this out: "The only way President Hoover can be renominated is to get delegates to the convention. There are about 20 or 30 different methods by which these delegates are selected and the president's friends will conform to these methods in the different states."

For quite a while it has been regarded as a certainty that revamping the republican national committee for 1932 campaigning purposes could be expected momentarily.

Brown's announcement—spoken like a chairman—may mean that revamping has arrived.

Butterflies Attempt to Devour Scientist in Paraguay Jungle

Buenos Aires, March 15 (AP).—Out of the jungles of northeastern Paraguay—"a land of mold and blood"—has come the story of an American zoologist who is fighting his way to the headwaters of the Parana river under the lash of hunger, heart and every creeping thing.

Dr. Donald S. Wees, of Elkins, West Virginia, is under commission from the Harvard university museum to explore the headwaters of the Parana river as far north as the Brazilian border. He left Rio Yaguin with two native companions three weeks ago in a sixteen-foot canoe and is following the bends of the stream over a region lying about 700 miles west of Rio Janeiro and the same distance north of Buenos Aires.

"While flicking fire ants from the paper in 90 degrees of heat and 90 per cent humidity, with polverines devouring me and yatebull crawling up my trouser legs," he writes under date of February 20 a letter that was sent by runner to the nearest river boat point and thence here.

Harassed by brilliant butterflies which bite like horseflies and living sometimes on yellow worms, he says "the final ranch of thatch and split palms has been left far behind. This is the most grandly deserted district outside of Chaco, which lies westward and is less hot, wet, forested or prolific with fauna and insects than this."

"We spent days and night hunting and when we shot nothing we were hungry in a forest of game. Braised alligator tail tastes like flaked codfish. Here spider webs enmesh birds. Ants drive us from our hammocks into a circle of ashes. The hordes of insects for which the region does not provide a living cause us night after night of sleeplessness. One especially virulent species has poisoned us all. Potent does not describe this land of mold and blood, much of which is fully as challenging to the explorer or scientist or adventurer as the Matto Grosso or Chaco jungles."

"There are uncounted leagues of uninhabited forest which support every form of animal life. We are launching into it with a bag of rice, a tin of yerba and eight kilograms of flour, hoping to shoot enough game as we go on."

Doctor Wees, the first American to penetrate the region, left Buenos Aires last October and expects to reach his goal about April 15. He probably will proceed to Corumbá, Brazil, and go by rail to Rio Janeiro.

Local Dribblers Again Defeat St. Wenceslaus
Cagers 34 To 23.

The Gettysburg Fleet - Wings soared to their twenty-third victory of the season here Monday night, walloping the St. Wenceslaus dribblers of Baltimore for the second time this year, 34-23.

For three-quarters of the game the teams battled on even terms with the score close at all times. In the last ten minutes of play the Wings sent their lead rocketing with some nice playing while the visitors failed to puncture the Wing defense.

Buehler led the local offense in the first half which enabled the Wings to grab a 14-11 lead at half time.

Visitors Take Lead
The Marylanders started off with a rush in the last half and a quartet of goals by Brockmeyer, Russell and Pazowick gave the visitors a 19-17 lead early in the last half. After a time out the locals braced and slowly forged into the lead which they held until the final whistle.

On Wednesday night the Fleet-Wing quintet will journey to Mount Union. Olson's Swedes will be the next home attraction, being booked for next Monday.

In a rough and tumble preliminary game, the Epco dribblers upset the Arendtsville independents 33-17. This ties up the series for the independent championship of Adams county, each team having won one game. The deciding game Arendtsville maintained a slight edge in the first half and led 12-11 at intermission. The Epcos took the lead early in the second half and as their score mounted played rings around their opponents.

Kitty Frew

by JANE ABBOTT

SYNOPSIS: Discovery that her mother-in-law is plotting to undermine her marriage determines Kitty Frew to persuade her husband to take her away from his parents' home. She has not been happy staying there, but Gar's mother persists in giving Gar money and telling him to have a good time instead of going to work. Her small-town background prevents her from fitting in with Gar's friends, and she is ostracized especially by Marge Crosby, who wants to marry Gar. For some time Gar has been busy with Marge, helping direct a little theatre group. Once during his absence Kitty met Gar's half-brother, David, who is estranged from his family, and whom she likes and trusts. Gar is young and irresponsible, but he tries to realize Kitty's discontent and his mother's unfriendly attitude toward her. Kitty feels that she is not being warm to her friends, but says she will war-

Chapter 13 ULTIMATUM

Pound was telling Mrs. Frew that Griffin was at the door with the car. They went away; Kitty heard Pound going from the drawing room with the tea things.

She went swiftly up the stairs; she shut the door of her room—Gar's room—behind her. Standing against it, she stared about her for a moment, as if the familiar things in the room had taken on strangeness. Gar's things, for the most part; her own few possessions seemed scarcely to show. She bathed, running the water to almost scalding heat, yet so hot was she still with anger that she felt it cool. She dressed, her fingers moving mechanically.

Before her mirror she suddenly put down her brush. Why, that girl facing her wasn't Kitty Brandon! She gave a short half-laugh. Her chin—it was funny—thrust out! And then she remembered what David had said about her chin, other things David had said. "If you have a chance—"

And now she had her chance, right in her hand. She and Gar could go to a hotel for tonight and tomorrow they'd find a furnished apartment, a home secure from that woman's scheming.

She put on the dress she had traveled in, coming to Winton. She dragged her suitcase out from the depths of Gar's clothes closet and began to pack her clothes in it, a little heedlessly. She had just taken the new yellow chiffon from its hook when she heard Gar's step on the stairs outside. She dropped it to open the door.

"Gar!" she chanced to call. Oh, he was so big, so dear. "Gar, it's so good to feel you!"

Then she straightened a little away to look up at him. She kept tight hold of his hand as she drew him into the room. "Now tell me all about it!"

"It's going to be great, Kit. Decker caught Marge's ideas right off. We're going to keep the barn, the rafters and things—"

"But Gar, I mean—your father! What did he say about the job?"

Gar was taking off his coat. He did not notice the pleading on Kitty's face. "Oh, that," he answered easily. "I didn't see Dad. I talked over with the Mother, and she advised against it. She thinks I ought to stick around home this winter and give my time to this new theater venture. We're fixed comfortably, and it isn't as if Dad couldn't afford to keep us. Say—we've got to get dressed, Kit. The bunch is going to the Hoffman for dinner. Somers's going, with Marge. Red's in a stew about that fix the studs in my shirt, will you, sweet? I'll jump into a bath—"

Kitty took a dress shirt out of Gar's bureau. She put in the studs and spread the shirt out on the bed. She found a collar and a tie and put them beside it. Socks—she was shivering; her whole body felt cold, numb, her brain a dead thing. There was something she had to do—tell Gar, something she had to do—She took up the yellow dress, vaguely aware that it had to do with her purpose, and was standing, staring dumbly down at it when Gar emerged from the bathroom, rubbing his curly hair with a towel.

"That's right, Kit—wear that. It's going to be a big night tonight. His words, his tone released her brain from its numbing weight. She faced him, crushing the yellow dress in her hands.

"I'm not going tonight, Gar." He saw her face, then. He stared at it, puzzled, frowning a little.

"Not going? What's the big idea?"

"I'm not going out with you any more—until you can pay for our pleasure with money you've earned." She could let in a faint surprise at the steadiness of her tone.

Gar's frown deepened. "Oh, lord, are you going to begin that old song? Well, you can't mind if I go without you."

"I can't mind it as much as the humiliation of going with you and knowing that your mother is—buying you!"

But Gar did not hear that. His angry glance had gone to the half-packed suitcase.

"What's this? Going back to the chickens and the pigs? Well, remember me to them and to Aunt Jeremia and Uncle Joshua—"

He looked so like an angry, spoiled boy, his hair rough, his suspenders hanging, his fingers fumbling with his collar, that a part of Kitty wanted to laugh, to smother the unruly collar button, to smooth his hair, to kiss away the dark, soot. But she did not move. She dropped the yellow dress she had been crushing in her arms to the floor.

"I am not going to stay in this house another night. When you are ready to support a home I'll come back to you." Again she left that surprise at the coolness with which she could answer.

"You will, will you? That's kind." Gar was savagely dragging on his clothes. He turned to back to Kitty. She scarcely stirred until he had finished dressing and had gone out, slamming the door behind him.

She had no feeling of hurt or heartache, only her driving need of escape. She finished packing her clothes. She shut the bag and put on her hat and coat and gloves. She took up her purse—then she looked at it in dismay.

She had only ten dollars. That was not enough to take her home.

David—He'd help her, of course. She went to the telephone. "Park, 893." Strange that she remembered it! And when his voice came over the wire: "David, can I see you at once?"

A new life begins for Kitty in the next installment, while she tries to plan for a future apparently empty.

Politics At Random

By BYRON PRICE
Associated Press Staff

By Byron Price
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Is the proud and frankly expressive old name "campaign manager" about to disappear from national politics, following into oblivion such old-fashioned trimmings as the scurrious handbill and the torch-light parade?

Among the outstanding aspirants for the presidency today, not one in either party has followed the well-established practice, and put his fortunes fully into the hands of a trusted friend clothed with managerial majesty and title.

This all appears to be part of a new finesse in the operations of practical politics. The advent of the managerless era coincides with a period when far more than the usual percentage among the candidates themselves incline to the shrinking violet method of approach to greatness.

A certain amount of stage setting always is to be expected in politics. A survey probably would disclose that only a small part of the apparent unemployment among campaign managers is actual, and that most of them are working as usual under new disguises.

Brown In Limelight
It has been accepted widely that Postmaster General Walter F. Brown is the field marshal of the Hoover renomination campaign. This impression has arisen from Brown's unceasing harvesting of delegates, and from an expectation that he will be chosen chairman of the national committee after the convention.

Events are disclosing almost daily, however, that the Brown leadership lacks much of the authority usually vested in a fully-ordained manager. Witness, for example, the independent activities of Ray Benjamin, the president's California friend, and various others.

There is pretty good evidence, too, that Mr. Hoover has made no final promises as to the committee chairmanship.

He is said to be considering his secretary of war, Patrick J. Hurley, of Oklahoma, who in recent weeks has been delegated with increasing frequency to return the fire of democratic sharpshooters.

Problems for Roosevelt
Franklin D. Roosevelt's attempt to keep his campaign innocent of managerial taint has developed some distressing complications.

The Roosevelt idea is to cast James A. Farley in the role of a "coordinator" of the local campaigns in the several states. It is the Roosevelt fashion to refer to Farley's office as a "clearing house," not a headquarters.

When Homer S. Cummings of Connecticut went to Washington recently and began rallying members of congress for Roosevelt the story went around that Farley had been supplanted. That this development caused considerable worry was evidenced by the disclaimers which bobbed up quickly in various quarters close to the candidate.

Farley got on a train for Washington, and it was arranged to send to the capital other Roosevelt leaders to demonstrate that no generalissimo's baton had been presented to Cummings or anyone else.

Manager Three Days
The Texans who met at San Antonio and launched the boom for Speaker John N. Garner designated Representative Samuel Rayburn as a sort of chief-without-title of the Garnerites. Rayburn's manager-ship, such as it was, lasted about three days.

First there was a disagreement in the Texas delegation in congress, some members favoring an immediate, open campaign for Garner delegates, and others opposing it.

Then Rayburn began to get telegrams from all over the country, asking for instructions as to the local conduct of the Garner campaign.

paign. He found it necessary to issue a public statement saying "he was no 'manager,' but merely a representative of some of Garner's friends in Texas.

Tally-Ho Goes On
In spite of all this noisy applying of the brakes, the political tally-ho goes rolling serenely on.

Former Governor Smith remarked recently that no man ever yet bagged a nomination without going out hunting for it.

However few may wear the outward badge of rank and title, and whoever may be elected, it is safe to assume that the customary number of deserving workers will be found waiting in line at the White House gates on March 4, 1933.

About New York

By William Gaines

New York.—From the drawing accents you hear coming over the counters you might judge that most of the soda jerkers in Manhattan came from the south.

"Yo orrah, please?" is a familiar sounding query in many drug stores and confectionaries. Easterners respond with a quizzical look—sometimes, perhaps, as much because of the "please" as because of the accent.

"They're courteous boys," say the drug store managers, "and the customers seem to like them."

One manager explained that New York boys treat the soda jerking profession in a silent, efficient manner. New Englanders do likewise, but the southerners put a bit of their personality into the business.

Back home, they remember, everybody takes a personal interest in everybody else. They have brought this trait of being solicitous with them to the big town.

"Is yoah drink sweet enuf?" they want to know.

Counter Chatter
"I'd like to have more time to talk to people," said Joe, from New Orleans, "but they don't hang around the counter so much like they do down home. If they did, I guess the manager'd tell 'em to move on. We're too busy."

These boys who responded to the lure of New York find it easier to get employment behind the counter than in some other businesses.

Here, as elsewhere, the turn-over among soda jerkers is rapid. And if they could mix a chocolate malted down in Nashville they can do the same thing here.

You'll learn that some of the young fellows are graduates of southern colleges, and you'll catch a glimpse of their fraternity pins.

They do their fanciest egg flipping and sandwich trimming when the "orrah" comes from a pretty feminine mouth.

Oddities and Endings
The lost and found department of a big New York movie house is a veritable museum of personal effects.

The check at one theatre reveals that only 40 per cent of the lost articles are reclaimed. In one month 3,500 findings were reported to the management, too.

They included everything from a set of false upper teeth to an old fashioned family album.

Head men in the movie company home offices are not always readily accessible, despite their reputed love for personal publicity.

They maintain publicity departments to speak for them on most subjects, and the publicity boys and girls have to prove themselves eloquent mouthpieces or else—

Persons who have really pressing business with the big executives must run the gauntlet of secretaries and various other subordinates.

A young graduate chemist contributes this information. He knew, before he got a job in one of the manufacturing plants, that he would have plenty of use for his knowledge of chemistry in making imitation jewelry.

But he did not fully realize to what extent his talent and learning would be taxed in competitive efforts to create new effects and shades-of-brilliance.

ORRTANNA

Ortanna—Evangelical services are being conducted each night at the Mount Carmel United Brethren church by the pastor, the Rev. S. Fred Christman.

Considerable damage was done to the telephone service in this vicinity during the recent snow storm, and as a result local residents are without telephone service.

Mrs. Luther Baltzley recently spent several days visiting friends in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Baltzley and son, Eldon, of Stewartstown, have returned home after concluding a week's visit with relatives at Hanover, Littlestown, Hagerstown and Ortanna. While here they were the guests of Mr. Baltzley's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Wetzel.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baker and family, Ortanna R. 2, spent last Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Amos Baker, Seven Stars.

C. S. Baltzley, of Manchester, York county, spent Friday night with Mr. and Mrs. Luther Wetzel.

John G. Taylor, who spent the winter months with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Baltzley, Ortanna R. 1, has gone to Arendtsville where he has secured employment.

AMUSEMENTS

The most representative class of "strenuous objectors" in the world are children, and no one knows this better than Clive Brook, leading man in "Husband and Wife," the Paramount picture of domestic life's joys and disappointments, which comes to the Majestic theatre Wednesday.

Brook recently had to do some tall explaining before he convinced Marilyn Knowlden and Dickie Moore, child actors, of the necessity of going through a scene in the play during its filming in Hollywood.

At the end of a rather long scene Brook was supposed to put the children to bed. On the first "take" the children were perfect until the end of the scene. They objected to being put to bed. Several times more the scene was spoiled.

Finally the mystery was cleared when Dickie demanded: "What's the matter with our acting?"

"Nothing," he was told. "Then what are you putting us to bed for?"

GOLF

By O. B. Keeler

Notes on the first Gaperilla open at Tampa.

"Twenty years ago," said Willie Macfarlane, "or a bit more, when I first came to this country, if 32 competitors qualified in an open tournament like this one, the list would be thick with Smiths and MacDonalds and other obvious Scotsmen. Now in the 32 here, we have one native Scot—and at least 30 native-born Americans, mostly youngsters."

The old game has changed a lot in the last two decades. Macfarlane played some fine golf in the medal rounds, and in winning his way to the finals where the youthful Paul Runvan defeated him, 3-1. He produced cards of 39-67-126 to tie with Dick Metz, who died 67-69-136.

Metz, incidentally, accomplished his first round and a half an ambition cherished by every expert golfer—to secure 27 consecutive holes in better than 100.

Metz' last round was 67; and the first nine of the afternoon rounds was 32 which makes 99.

Metz missed up the last hole for a bird 6 which kept him in a tie with Macfarlane, and went as far as the third round, with Wild Bill Mehlhorn, who got his powerful name organized on the last nine and touched off so many 3's under the San Angelo kid that he went out, 4-3, after looking very much like a winner in the first nine.

144 Tag End
I firmly believe that this Gaperilla tournament at the Palma Cien Golf club, Florida, produced the fastest scoring ever recorded in any tournament, regular or irregular, in which 32 competitors were qualified.

As stated, the co-medalists were Macfarlane and Metz, at 136. But Metz required the equivalent of two cards of 72 to get in the play-off.

Kitty Frew

by JANE ABBOTT

SYNOPSIS: Discovery that her mother-in-law is plotting to undermine her marriage determines Kitty Frew to persuade her husband to take her away from his parents' home. She has not been happy staying there, but Gar's mother persists in giving her money and telling him to have a good time instead of going to work. Her small-town background prevents her from fitting in with Gar's friends, and she is ostracized especially by Marge Crosby, who wants to marry Gar. For some time Gar has been busy with Marge, helping direct a little theatre group. Once during his absence Kitty met Gar's half-brother, David, who is estranged from his family, and whom she likes and trusts. Gar is young and irresponsible, and fails to realize Kitty's discontent and his mother's unfriendly attitude toward her. He would like her to be warmer to his friends, but says he will work.

Chapter 13 ULTIMATUM

Pound was telling Mrs. Frew that Griffin was at the door with the car. They went away; Kitty heard Pound going from the drawing room with the tea things.

She went swiftly up the stairs; she shut the door of her room—Gar's room—behind her. Standing against it, she stared about her for a moment, as if the familiar things in the room had taken on strangeness. Gar's things, for the most part; her own few possessions seemed scarcely to show. She bathed, running the water to almost scalding heat, yet so hot was she still with anger that she felt it cool. She dressed, her fingers moving mechanically.

Before her mirror she suddenly put down her brush. Why, that girl facing her wasn't Kitty Brandon! She gave a short half-laugh. Her chin—it was funny—thrust out! And then she remembered what David had said about her chin. Other things David had said. "If you have a chance—"

And now she had her chance, right in her hand. She and Gar could go to a hotel for tonight and tomorrow they'd find a furnished apartment, a home secure from that woman's scheming.

She put on the dress she had traveled in, coming to Winton. She dragged her suitcase out from the depths of Gar's clothes closet and began to pack her clothes in it, a little heedlessly. She had just taken the new yellow chiffon from its hook when she heard Gar's step on the stairs outside. She dropped it to open the door.

"Gar!" she clung to him. Oh, he was so big, so dear. "Gar, it's so good to feel you!"

Then she straightened a little away to look up at him. She kept tight hold of his hand as she drew him into the room. "Now tell me all about it!"

"It's going to be great, Kit. Decker caught Marge's ideas right off. We're going to keep the barn effect, the rafters and things—"

"But Gar, mean—your father! What did he say about the job?"

Gar was taking off his coat. He did not notice the pleading on Kitty's face. "Oh, that," he answered easily. "I didn't see Dad. I talked over with the Mother, and she advised against it. She thinks I ought to stick around home this winter and give my time to this new theater venture. We're fixed comfortably, and it isn't as if Dad couldn't afford to keep us. Say—we've got to get dressed, Kit. The bunch is going to the Hoffman for dinner. Somers's going, with Marge. Red's in a stew about that. Fix the studs in my shirt, will you, sweet? I'll jump into a bath—"

Kitty took a dress shirt out of Gar's bureau. She put it on the studs and spread the shirt out on the bed. She found a collar and a tie and put them beside it. Socks—She was shivering; her whole body felt cold, numb, her brain a dead thing. There was something she had to do—tell Gar something she had to do—She took up the yellow dress, vaguely aware that it had to do with her purpose, and was standing, staring dumbly down at it when Gar emerged from the bathroom, rubbing his curly hair with a towel.

"That's right, Kit—wear that. It's going to be a big night tonight." His words, his tone released her brain from its numbing weight. She faced him, crushing the yellow dress in her hands.

"I'm not going tonight, Gar." He saw her face, then. He stared at it, puzzled, frowning a little.

"Not going? What's the big idea?"

"I'm not going out with you any more until you can pay for our pleasure with money you've earned."

She could let in a faint surprise at the steadiness of her tone.

Gar's frown deepened. "Oh, lord, are you going to begin that old song? Well, you can't mind if I go without you."

"I can't mind it as much as the humiliation of going with you and knowing that your mother is—buying you!"

But Gar did not hear that. His angry glance had gone to the half-packed suitcase.

"What's this? Going back to the chickens and the pigs? Well, remember me to them and to Aunt Jemima and Uncle Joshua—"

He looked so like an angry, spoiled boy, his hair rough, his suspenders hanging, his fingers fumbling with his collar, that a part of Kitty wanted to laugh, to manage the unruly collar button, to smooth his hair, to kiss away the dark scowl. But she did not move. She dropped the yellow dress she had been crushing in her arms to the floor.

"I am not going to stay in this house another night. When you are ready to support a home I'll come back to you." Again she felt that surprise at the coolness with which she could answer.

"You will, will you? That's kind." Gar was savagely dragging on his clothes. He turned to back to Kitty. She scarcely stirred until he had finished dressing and had gone out, slamming the door behind him.

She had no feeling of hurt or heartache, only her driving need of escape. She finished packing her clothes. She shut the bag and put on her hat and coat and gloves. She took up her purse—then she looked at it in dismay.

She had only ten dollars. That was not enough to take her home.

David—He'd help her, of course. She went to the telephone, "Park 893." Strange that she remembered it! And when his voice came over the wire: "David, can I see you at once?"

A new life begins for Kitty in the next installment, while she tries to plan for a future apparently empty.

Politics At Random

By BYRON PRICE
Associated Press Staff

By Byron Price
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Is the proud and frankly expressive old name "campaign manager" about to disappear from national politics, following into oblivion such old-fashioned trimmings as the scurrious handbill and the torch-light parade?

Among the outstanding aspirants for the presidency today, not one in either party has followed the well-established practice, and put his fortunes fully into the hands of a trusted friend clothed with managerial majesty and title.

This all appears to be part of a new finesse in the operations of practical politics. The advent of the manager-like coincides with a period when far more than the usual percentage among the candidates themselves incline to the shrinking violet method of approach to greatness.

A certain amount of stage setting always is to be expected in politics. A survey probably would disclose that only a small part of the apparent unemployment among campaign managers is actual, and that most of them are working as usual under new disguises.

Brown In Limelight

It has been accepted widely that Postmaster General Walter F. Brown is the field marshal of the Hoover renomination campaign. This impression has arisen from Brown's unceasing harvesting of delegates, and from an expectation that he will be chosen chairman of the national committee after the convention.

Events are disclosing almost daily, however, that the Brown leadership lacks much of the authority usually vested in a fully ordained manager. Witness, for example, the independent activities of Ray Benjamin, the president's California friend, and various others.

There is pretty good evidence, too, that Mr. Hoover has made no final promises as to the committee chairmanship.

He is said to be considering his secretary of war, Patrick J. Hurley, of Oklahoma, who in recent weeks has been delegated with increasing frequency to return the fire of democratic sharpshooters.

Problems for Roosevelt

Franklin D. Roosevelt's attempt to keep his campaign innocent of managerial taint has developed some distressing complications.

The Roosevelt idea is to cast James A. Farley in the role of a "coordinator" of the local campaigns in the several states. It is the Roosevelt fashion to refer to Farley's office as a "clearing house," not a headquarters.

When Homer S. Cummings of Connecticut went to Washington recently and began rallying members of congress for Roosevelt, the story went around that Farley had been supplanted. That this development caused considerable worry was evidenced by the disclaimers which bobbed up quickly in various quarters close to the candidate.

Farley got on a train for Washington, and it was arranged to send to the capital other Roosevelt leaders to demonstrate that no generalissimo's baton had been presented to Cummings or anyone else.

Manager Three Days

The Texans who met at San Antonio and launched the boom for Speaker John N. Garner designated Representative Samuel Rayburn as a sort of chief-without-title of the Garnerites. Rayburn's manager-skip, such as it was, lasted about three days.

First there was a disagreement in the Texas delegation in congress, some members favoring an immediate open campaign for Garner delegates, and others opposing it.

Then Rayburn began to get telegrams from all over the country, asking for instructions as to the local conduct of the Garner campaign.

He found it necessary to issue a public statement saying he was no "manager," but merely a representative of some of Garner's friends in Texas.

Tally-Ho Goes On

In spite of all this noisy applying of the brakes, the political tally-ho goes rolling serenely on.

Former Governor Smith remarked recently that no man ever yet bagged a nomination without going out hunting for it.

However few may wear the outward badge of rank and title, and whoever may be elected, it is safe to assume that the customary number of deserving workers will be found waiting in line at the White House gates on March 4, 1933.

About New York

By William Gaines

New York—From the drawing accents you hear coming over the counters you might judge that most all the soda jerkers in Manhattan came from the south.

"Yo ordah, please?" is a familiar sounding query in many drug stores and confectionaries. Easterners respond with a quizzical look—sometimes, perhaps, as much because of the "please" as because of the accent.

"They're courteous boys," say the drug store managers, "and the customers seem to like them."

One manager explained that New York boys treat the soda jerking profession in a silent, efficient manner. New Englanders do likewise, but the southerners put a bit of their personality into the business.

Back home, they remember, everybody takes a personal interest in everybody else. They have brought this trait of being solicitous with them to the big town.

"Is yoah drink sweet enuf?" they want to know.

Counter Chatter

"I'd like to have more time to talk to people," said Joe, from New Orleans, "but they don't hang around the counter so much like they do down home. If they did, I guess the manager'd tell 'em to move on. We're too busy."

These boys who responded to the lure of New York find it easier to get employment behind the counter than in some other businesses.

Here, as elsewhere, the turn-over among soda jerkers is rapid. And if they could mix a chocolate malted down in Nashville they can do the same thing here.

You'll learn that some of the young fellows are graduates of southern colleges, and you'll catch a glimpse of their fraternity pins.

They do their fanciest egg flipping and sandwich trimming when the "ordah" comes from a pretty feminine mouth.

Oddities and Endings

The lost and found department of a big New York movie house is a veritable museum of personal effects.

The check at one theatre reveals that only 40 per cent of the lost articles are reclaimed. In one month 3,500 findings were reported to the management, too.

They included everything from a set of false upper teeth to an old fashioned family album.

Head men in the movie company home offices are not always readily accessible, despite their reputed love for personal publicity.

They maintain publicity departments to speak for them on most subjects, and the publicity boys and girls have to prove themselves eloquent mouthpieces or else—

Persons who have really pressing business with the big executives must run the gauntlet of secretaries and various other subordinates.

A young graduate chemist contributes this information. He knew, before he got a job in one of the manufacturing plants, that he would have plenty of use for his knowledge of chemistry in making imitation jewelry.

But he did not fully realize to what extent his talent and learning would be taxed in competitive efforts to create new effects and shades-of-brilliant.

AMUSEMENTS

The most representative class of "strenuous objects" in the world are children, and no one knows this better than Clive Brook, leading man in "Husband's Holiday," the Paramount picture of domestic life its joys and disappointments, which comes to the Majestic theatre Wednesday.

Brook recently had to do some tall explaining before he convinced Marilyn Knowlden and Dickie Moore, child actors, of the necessity of going through a scene in the play during its filming in Hollywood.

At the end of a rather long scene Brook was supposed to put the children to bed. On the first "take" the children were perfect until the end of the scene. They objected to being put to bed. Several times more the scene was spoiled.

Finally the mystery was cleared when Dickie demanded: "What's the matter with our acting?"

"Nothing," he was told. "Then what are you putting us to bed for?"

New York, March 15 (AP).—The stock market turned upward quietly today as recent liquidation dried up and sentiment improved. A little irregularity cropped out soon after the opening but the list firmed in the second hour.

TWO KILLED IN MOTOR CRASH

Two Others Seriously Injured
When Bus And Auto
Crash Head-on.

Philadelphia, March 15. — Two Philadelphians, a man and a woman, were killed and two others seriously injured in an automobile crash at Trappe, near Collegeville, late Monday.

Those who lost their lives were Mrs. Lawrence Pleis, 26, of 2432 West Harold street, and Frederick A. Schumacker, a carpenter, of 2829 West Harold street.

The injured are Robert Pleis 5 a son of the dead woman, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Henry Pleis, 2316 Huntingdon street. Both suffered possible fractures of the skull, deep scalp wounds and other injuries.

The victims' car, driven by Schumacker, a friend of the Pleis family, collided with a Reading Transportation company bus bound for this city. Several passengers in the bus were cut and bruised.

The automobile, traveling east on the Benjamin Franklin highway, was struck with such force that it was jammed against an embankment and wrecked. Mrs. Lawrence Pleis and Schumacker were killed instantly.

Corporal Clarence Boyle, of the state highway patrol, was the first to arrive at the scene. Aided by the bus driver and bus passengers, he extricated the victims from their wrecked car and had them sent to Homeopathic hospital in Pottstown. Later the bodies of Mrs. Lawrence Pleis and Schumacker were removed to an undertaking establishment.

Schumacker and the Pleises were returning home from Graterford, where they had attended a dance. Police notified their relatives of the accident shortly after 5 p. m., and the husbands of the two women left for Pottstown at once.

HOOVER'S HAT PUT IN RING

Postmaster General Brown
Announces Candidacy Of
President Hoover.

Washington.—It was not the actual announcement of President Hoover's candidacy for renomination on the republican ticket that interested Washington observers so much, but rather the man chosen to make it.

It has been known for a long while that Hoover seeks a second term. The famous "Who-But-Hoover" question has been settled in the minds of almost everyone.

True, the formal announcements was news for all the papers. But the fact that a certain gentleman—Postmaster General Walter F. Brown—gave out the statement may mean that a vexing problem of the G. O. P. has been solved.

That problem is a new chairman of the republican national committee.

Why Brown? Wry was the postmaster general delegated to announce formally that President Hoover was a candidate for renomination on the republican ticket?

Such statements usually are voiced either by the candidates themselves or by the party committee chairman. The latter happens to be Senator Fess of Ohio. The senator was in the capital at the time—just a few blocks away in the senate chamber.

If not Fess, then why shouldn't it have been the second in command, Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the party?

Or Pat Hurley, secretary of war? Speaks Like A Chairman

It begins to look as though rumors are true that Brown will take over the committee and engage in rounding up convention delegates for Hoover.

A paragraph in his Hoover announcement seems to bear this out: "The only way President Hoover can be renominated is to get delegates to the convention. There are about 20 or 30 different methods by which these delegates are selected and the president's friends will conform to these methods in the different states."

For quite a while it has been regarded as a certainty that revamping the republican national committee for 1932 campaigning purposes could be expected momentarily.

Brown's announcement—spoken like a chairman—may mean that revamping has arrived.

No Artillery Units Going To Tobyhanna

Washington, March 15 (AP).—Regular army field artillery units will not be sent to Tobyhanna, Pa., military reservation, for training this summer.

Major General H. G. Bishop today notified Senator Reed that the batteries will be transferred to Fort Hoyle, Maryland, for training.

General Bishop said that Tobyhanna reservation has been allowed to deteriorate to such an extent with the last several years that the regular troops could not train there efficiently.

Butterflies Attempt to Devour Scientist in Paraguay Jungle

Buenos Aires, March 15 (AP).—Out of the jungles of northeastern Paraguay—"a land of mold and blood"—has come the story of an American zoologist who is fighting his way to the headwaters of the Parana river under the lash of hunger, heat and every creeping thing.

Dr. Donald S. Wees, of Elkins, West Virginia, is under commission from the Harvard university museum to explore the headwaters of the Parana river as far north as the Brazilian border. He left Rio Yaguin with two native companions three weeks ago in a sixteen-foot canoe and is following the bends of the stream over a region lying about 700 miles west of Rio Janeiro and the same distance north of Buenos Aires.

"While flicking fire ants from the paper in 90 degrees of heat and 90 per cent humidity, with polverines devouring me and yatebul crawling up my trouser legs," he writes under date of February 20 a letter that was sent by runner to the nearest river boat point and thence here.

Harassed by brilliant butterflies which bite like horseflies and living sometimes on yellow worms, he says "the final ranch of thatch and split palms has been left far behind. This is the most grandly deserted district outside of Chaco, which lies westward and is less hot, wet, forested or prolific with fauna and insects than this."

"We spent days and night hunting and when we shot nothing we were hungry in a forest of game. Braised alligator tail tastes like flaked codfish. Here, spider webs enmesh birds. Ants drive us from our hammocks into a circle of ashes. "The herds of insects for which the region does not provide a living cause us night after night of sleeplessness. One especially virulent species has poisoned us all. Potent does not describe this land of mold and blood, much of which is fully as challenging to the explorer or scientist or adventurer as the Matto Grosso or Chaco jungles."

"There are uncounted leagues of uninhabited forest which support every form of animal life. We are launching into it with a bag of rice, a tin of yerba and eight kilograms of flour, hoping to shoot enough game as we go on."

Dr. Wees, the first American to penetrate the region, left Buenos Aires last October and expects to reach his goal about April 15. He probably will proceed to Corumbá, Brazil, and go by rail to Rio Janeiro.

WINGS WHACK BALTIMORE FIVE

Local Dribblers Again Defeat St. Wenceslaus Cagers 34 To 23.

The Gettysburg Fleet—Wings, soared to their twenty-third victory of the season here Monday night, walloping the St. Wenceslaus dribblers of Baltimore for the second time this year, 34-23.

For three-quarters of the game the teams battled on even terms with the score close at all times. In the last ten minutes of play the Wings sent their lead rocketing with some nice playing while the visitors failed to puncture the Wing defense.

Buehler led the local offense in the first half which enabled the Wings to grab a 14-11 lead at half time.

Visitors Take Lead

The Marylanders started off with a rush in the last half and a quartet of goals by Brockmeyer, Russell and Pazowick gave the visitors a 19-17 lead early in the last half. After a time out the locals braced and slowly forged into the lead which they held until the final whistle.

On Wednesday night the Fleet-Wing quintet will journey to Mount Union. Olson's Swedes will be the next home attraction, being booked for next Monday.

In a rough and tumble preliminary game, the Epco dribblers upset the Arendtsville independents 33-17. This ties up the series for the independent championship of Adams county, each team having won one game. The deciding game Arendtsville maintained a slight edge in the first half and led 12-11 at intermission. The Epocs took the lead early in the second half and as their score mounted played rings around their opponents.

A Bright Career Closed.—Gen.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

Therefore, when he was gone out,
Jesus said, Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.

If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him.

Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me;
and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

A new commandment I give unto you, That we love one another: as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

John 13:31-35.

William W. Wright was found dead
on Thursday night in the Philadelphia prison, to which he had been committed the night before for drunkenness. Gen. Wright was born in Adams county, of a highly esteemed family, and had a brilliant career, which was clouded in recent years by intemperate habits. In 1888 he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad as a civil engineer and soon developed great capacity and energy. In 1887 he was employed to survey the interoceanic railway. In the earlier part of the war he served as chief engineer of the Army of the Potomac with the rank of general. He subsequently accompanied Gen. Sherman on his march to the sea. At the close of the war his engineering capacities were called into requisition in building bridges and various public works in the west. Two years ago he was chosen by Count De Lesseps as the American engineer of the proposed ship canal across the isthmus of Darien. His intemperate habits grew on him and he returned to Philadelphia. On Wednesday night he was found by a policeman lying drunk on the pavement and committed to the prison for 24 hours.

allen township, after a brief illness,

Arms for the G. A. R.—Last week Congressman Bingham secured the passage in the House of a joint resolution granting the use of guns, tents, muskets, etc., at the encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic of Pennsylvania on the Baltfield of Gettysburg in July 1882.
The bill provides that the arms and equipment are to be returned after

John J. Thoman whilst cutting up

SUNDOWN STORIES

BY GARY GRAHAM BONNER

It gave John a very fine feeling to be the one to take charge of the trips they were now having through Africa.

Of course the Maker of Magic had arranged everything so that the distances had been greatly reduced and in this way they were able to get around by themselves more easily.

Sometimes, as they walked from jungle to jungle, or climbed a mountain, or stood near waterfalls, or wandered over plains, they spoke of how natural it felt to be seeing these animals as they were seeing them.

"We feel just as safe, too," John said, "as though we were visiting a zoo and they were behind bars.
Yet they're free here, and we see them where they belong. It's a great trip, Peggy."

Peggy certainly agreed that this was so, and they both spoke of how very much they loved animals.

Now they went off in the direction of Liberia.

They stopped by a swampy river in a great forest. There under some low hanging trees were a family of pygmy hippopotami.

Each one was one-fourteenth the size of a big hippopotamus, but, even if John and Peggy had not known their name, they would have been able to guess.

"We're good natured," they told John and Peggy, "and we have a lovely family life."

"You wouldn't care for a meal of delicious plants, would you?"

John and Peggy laughingly refused the plants, but they ate some of the sandwiches Surprises had given to them before leaving.

MOUNTPLEASANT CHURCHES

St. Joseph's Catholic church of Bonaughtown, or Bonneauville, was founded in May, 1859, on lands donated by Alexander Shorb. The cornerstone was placed July 31, 1859, and the church was dedicated February 26, 1860. The Rev. Basil A. Shorb, a son of John Shorb, of Union township, who died April 4, 1871, aged sixty-one years, was the first pastor. The vault in which his remains were placed is in the center of the cemetery. Prior to the erection of this building the congregation attended church at Conowago. The Rev. Father Pope succeeded as pastor, and to him is due the change of the village name from Bonaughttown to Bonneauville. During his administration the brick denominational schoolhouse was erected and placed in charge of the Sisters of Charity. Father McIlhenny was appointed successor to the Rev. Mr.
Pope; later the Rev. Andrew O'Brien, then Father Shanahan was pastor, and he was succeeded by the Rev. Father Gorman.

St. Luke's Reformed church, near White Hall or Red Land and Bon-neauville, was organized in 1846,
with twenty members, by the Rev.
Jacob Sechler. The building was erected in 1846, and dedicated November 22, that year, as a Union
Lutheran and Reformed church.
Among the original members were Daniel Kohler, George Bowman,
David Biehl and William Goulden,
Luthers, Samuel Swope, Jacob
Miller and George Bowman formed the building committee.

Salem United Brethren church, also called "Stone Church", was erected in 1845 by the pastor, the Rev. Samuel L. Minnick. The preachers, whose names are given in the history of the church at Littletown, were also in charge of the Salem congregation.

The Catholic congregation of Mount Rock, or Centennial (as the old village was named in 1876), formed a part of the Conowago congregation up to 1869, when the stone church building was completed at "Mount Rock, over the hill," and named "St. Charles". The land on which this building stands was donated by Charles Smith for church and school purposes.

White Hall or Red Lands

This is the name given to a postal village in the southern part of the township. Close by there was a military post standing 130 years ago, but by whom erected or in what cause has not yet been ascertained.
The settlement of the hamlet dates back about twenty-six years, when the Lohrs and Millers located here;
a few years later William McSherry became interested in the location, and built a few dwelling houses and a large three-story business building, which subsequently became known as the National hotel. Enterprise was carried so far as to introduce a printing office there in 1878, the White Hall Visitor—a little journal devoted to Greenbackism—was started; next came the postoffice, tradesmen's shops, a large dry goods store, meat market and cigar factory. White Hall sprang up into a village. Its proximity to Little-town, Hanover, Gettysburg and New Oxford tends, in opposition to its enterprise, to limit its growth. The churches of the several denominations are within easy distance.

Red Land postoffice was established in September, 1866 or 1867, with William A. McSherry postmaster.

Mount Rock

This place is in the center of one of the earliest settlements in Pennsylvania. It is said that over a century and a half has passed away since the first house or cabin was built on the site of the Pohliman dwelling. In 1735 Lord Baltimore patented to Ludwig Shriver the land in this neighborhood, and on this tract he erected the second mill built on the Little Conowago, on the site of the O'Ball mill. The first merchant at this point was Daniel Lawrence, the pioneer tavern-keeper.

every other source of credit, and borrowers must post a prior lien on their crops as collateral.

Appoints Chicagoan

Henry S. Clarke, a Chicago banker, has been named by the secretary to administer the fund under the title of national director of 1932 crop production loans. He is to have a salary of $600 a month, and the regional agents for his office are to get $400. They are to be men who thoroughly understand credit affairs.

It was said for the secretary that responsibility for the loans was shifted from the seed loan office because the scope contemplated approximates "big business" and requires the services of specialists in finance.

Seed loan machinery heretofore has been limited to designated storm or drought areas, whereas the new work embraces the entire country and a multiplicity of crops.

Too, the seed loan office always has narrowed loans to the purchase of seed, feed and fertilizer. This time farmers will be allowed to borrow up to $1 an acre for other purposes.

Since it is believed most farmers have plenty of seed and feed because of good crops and low prices there is some indication that except for the purchase of fertilizer the greatest need will be for funds to pay taxes and other obligations. Even with a crop lien as security it is not felt that the seed loan office could administer funds not specified for production without running into complications. It is intended at present that Clark's organization is to be responsible for collections on loans made from the $50,000,000.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, The Files Reveal

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Local Items: George T. Heller, of near Wenksville, has discovered a large vein of iron on his farm.

Mr. James Pierce has sold his stock of goods to Louis Strouse, who also rents the house.

One day last week Abner Mills, of Cumberland township, was injured by a limb of a falling tree striking him on the breast. Dr. Bush was called in and rendered the necessary attention.

Dr. M. L. Bott, of Westminster, formerly of Gettysburg, has been appointed examining physician by the United States Pension Commissioner, to take the place of Dr. Woodward, who has resigned.

The grain, which in this neighborhood was looking well during the earlier part of the winter, has been seriously damaged by the alternate freezing and thawing of March.

Election: The Gettysburg Gas Company has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Dr. H. E. Jacobs; Managers, A. Elchenberger, A. D. Buehler, W. A. Duncan, H. J. Stahle, J. M. Walter and S. R. Russell.

On Saturday week, Hon. Isaac E. Wieman, near York Springs celebrated his 80th birthday, when there was a pleasant family re-union. The Judge was presented with a handsome cane.

Marriages: Albert — Eckenrode — Feb. 21, by the Rev. J. F. Bahner, M. E. Albert, of York Sulphur Springs, this county, to Miss Jennie C. Eckenrode, of Waynesboro.

Deaths: — Feb. 22d, at Tuscarora, Nev., by the Rev. Geo. J. Hays, A. W. Hesson, formerly of this county, to Miss Jessie A. Yates, of Tuscarora, Nevada.

Deaths: — March 1, in Littlestown by the Rev. D. N. Dittmer, Geo. Reever, of Gettysburg, to Mrs. Mary E. Currans, of Emmitsburg.

Deaths: — March 12, in Littlestown, by the Rev. E. D. Welch, William H. Stansbury, of Carroll county, Md., to Miss Mary C. Sell, of Union township, Adams county.

Deaths: — Dec. 27, near East Berlin, by the Rev. D. Sell, Dr. James L. Rea, of Scranton, Pa., to G. W. E. daughter of Augustus Deatrick.

Sufficient money has been collected to relieve Mr. St. Mary's college, near Emmitsburg, from its financial troubles. Last week Mr. J. H. Sherry, the Receiver, presented the petition to the Frederick court, requesting to be relieved from his trust. The court granted the petition and the college will resume its work free from embarrassment.

The Gettysburg Packing Company has its building completed and will shortly put in the machinery. Ben-on Dulle, Esq., of this place, and J. Frank Brinkerhoff of Westminster, will manage the canning business, under the firm name of Brinkerhoff and Dulle. It bids fair to be an important enterprise and ought to stimulate trucking business in this neighborhood.

Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.

If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him. Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me; and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

A new commandment I give unto you, That we love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

MOUNTPLEASANT CHURCHES

St. Joseph's Catholic church of Bonaughton, or Bonneville, was founded in May, 1859, on lands donated by Alexander Shorb. The cornerstone was placed July 31, 1859, and the church was dedicated February 26, 1860. The Rev. Basil A. Shorb, a son of John Shorb, of Union township, who died April 4, 1871, aged sixty-one years, was the first pastor. The vault in which his remains were placed is in the center of the cemetery. Prior to the erection of this building the congregation attended church at Conowago. The Rev. Father Pope succeeded as pastor, and to him is due the change of the village name from Bonaughton to Bonneville. During his administration the brick denominational schoolhouse was erected and placed in charge of the Sisters of Charity. Father McIlhenny was appointed successor to the Rev. Mr. Pope; later the Rev. Andrew O'Brien, then Father Shanahan was pastor, and he was succeeded by the Rev. Father Gorman.

St. Luke's Reformed church, near White Hall or Red Land and Bonneville, was organized in 1846, with twenty members, by the Rev. Jacob Sechler. The building was erected in 1846, and dedicated November 23, that year, as a Union Lutheran and Reformed church. Among the original members were Daniel Kohler, George Bowman, David Biehl and William Goulden, Lutherans. Samuel Swope, Jacob Miller and George Bowman formed the building committee.

Salem United Brethren church, also called "Stone Church," was erected in 1845 by the pastor, the Rev. Samuel L. Minnick. The preachers, whose names are given in the history of the church at Littlestown, were also in charge of the Salem congregation.

The Catholic congregation of Mount Rock, or Centennial (as the old village was named in 1876), formed a part of the Conowago congregation up to 1869, when the stone church building was completed at "Mount Rock, over the hill," and named "St. Charles." The land on which this building stands was donated by Charles Smith for church and school purposes.

White Hall or Red Lands This is the name given to a post-village in the southern part of the township. Close by there was a military post standing 130 years ago, but by whom erected or in what cause has not yet been ascertained. The settlement of the hamlet dates back about twenty-six years, when the Lohrs and Millers located here; a few years later William McSherry became interested in the location, and built a few dwelling houses and a large three-story business building, which subsequently became known as the National hotel. Enterprise was carried so far as to introduce a printing office there in 1878, the White Hall Visitor—a little journal devoted to Greenbackism—was started; next came the post-office, tradesmen's shops, a large dry goods store, meat market and cigar factory. White Hall sprang up into a village. Its proximity to Littlestown, Hanover, Gettysburg and New Oxford tends, in opposition to its enterprise, to limit its growth. The churches of the several denominations are within easy distance.

Red Land postoffice was established in September, 1866 or 1867, with William A. McSherry postmaster. Mount Rock This place is in the center of one of the earliest settlements in Pennsylvania. The first merchant at this point was Daniel Lawrence, the pioneer tavern-keeper.

A Short Sermon By S. S. W. Hammers

"Against Denominationalism"

St. John 17:21, 23
Before Jesus enters upon His tremendous ordeal He bows in prayer for those He was about to die to save. He prayed that they may be kept from the world, that they might at last be with Him in glory, and between these two petitions He places a prayer for "Unity, that they all may be one," giving as the reason, "that the world may know that Thou hast sent me." The world has discovered that the Divinity of Christ was to be the oneness of Christians. The world has now discovered that the greatest disadvantage to our denominational divisions is that they furnish the world with a powerful argument against Christianity. The world by this time should know that Christ commanded, "Unity." Just think, the Church of Christ separated into over 60 rival sects, many of them making more war upon one another than they do against sin. We have just received a letter from the atheist quarters, stating that they have now over a million members that disbelieve in a God. If only all denominations should unite and form one. We say that all so-called Christians are responsible for the fact that after these two thousand years, the majority of all mankind do not believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Because of these hundreds of different divisions, the Church has lost consciousness of the Church of God. Because of all these divisions the Church has lost consciousness of her oneness, her corporate individuality. Shall all these different denominations unite and form one? The first four chapters of Corinthians are devoted to reproofs and instructions concerning the sin of divisions. And their causes, as the apostles learned, existed among Christians of that city. Christ's law of unity is violated by division.

Hollywood—Fay Lamphier, who won the Atlantic City beauty contest of 1925, was a fizzle as a movie star, and Adrienne Dore, who was a close runner-up to the winner, has taken seven years to get anywhere on the screen.

Both are good illustrations of the fact that beauty isn't everything in film success—Fay because she dropped out, and Adrienne because she stuck and went through the mill of hard knocks to develop something more than beauty. Beauty she still has, but no less a star than Ruth Chatterton, in whose picture she worked, says Adrienne can really act.

Adrienne, fair, blonde, slim, with gray-green eyes—or are they blue?—was 15 when her mother took her to Atlantic City for the contest, and she has been stalling at film fame, off and on, ever since. But it was only recently she gained the recognition of a contract with a major company.

BUY AMERICAN SLOGAN

IN FINNS' BOYCOTT MOVE

Helsingfors (AP)—"Buy American" and "Buy British" are heard in Finland nowadays almost as often as "Buy Finnish."

The reason is the new German tariff on Finnish butter.

There is a widespread boycott of German products and the merits of American and British goods are set forth to lend impetus to the campaign.

More vivid is a report from Werklitz, a village of 400 people near Calbe. There is not a pupil to be graduated from the village school in the semester ending at Easter-tide and not one new pupil has been registered for the following term.

Ministry of the interior figures show that in 1900 there were nearly 2,000,000 births in the nation. In 1930 this total had shrunk to 1,126,800. That meant only 67 visits of the stork per thousand.

The only bright spots in the statistics are a decrease in infant mortality and the absence of epidemics.

Knows His Politics

But Rayburn is one of the best men for that kind of job the friends of Garner could have picked.

He is noted in congress, where he has served 19 years, for his coolness and his level head. He is a leader among the democrats in the house and sits in on the inner councils of his party.

Rayburn knows politics and plays the game in a practical way.

He Eyes Every Move

Texas selected Rayburn to look after Garner's interests because they wanted a man in Washington to keep things running orderly. He vetoes or approves every move made in Garner's behalf.

It was his idea that Garner should stay out of the primary in Georgia and he moved to persuade Judge Howard to withdraw. He knew that the Roosevelt set-up there was formidable and that at best probably the only thing Garner could get would be a black eye.

The wisdom of his decision was

Washington—Sam Rayburn, of Texas, veteran in politics that he is, in all probability during the next few months will learn some entirely new things about the game he has played almost since the time he was old enough to vote.

In charge of sponsoring Jack Garner for the democratic nomination for the presidency, the sturdy Texan is running into much the same things that the manager of an aspiring champion in sport encounters.

His task perhaps is even harder. He is not even permitted to enter his potential champion in preliminary bouts prior to the big battle at Chicago in June. Actually he must be alert to prevent such a thing by admirers of his man as evidenced by his effort to keep Garner out of the running in the Georgia primary.

The task of sitting idly by making friends for his candidate and placating enemies is not an easy one.

borne out later when Roosevelt requested Georgia democrats to permit Governor Murray, of Oklahoma, to enter.

That's Rayburn's mission. No one knows better than he the truth of the old political adage that "I can take care of myself, but God deliver me from my friends."

Casey Thomas, Texas fighter, scored a one-punch, 11-second knockout over Joe Thomas in a bout at Fort Worth.

TAGS ARE LENGTHY

An employe of the bureau of motor vehicles with a flair for statistics has figured out the number of tons of steel used in making the 1,827,413 motor vehicle tags for 1931 registrations. It was found they represented 1,439,762 pounds, or approximately 643 tons. This, it was said, is equivalent to 22 car loads. Converting the tags from tons to feet and miles, it was discovered that, if placed end to end they would reach a distance of 3,582,694 feet or 678.5 miles.
